SYNOPSIS

Tiana Grant, a high-powered real estate attorney, returns to Atlanta's West End after the death of her estranged aunt, intent on selling the rundown Victorian home she's inherited. But her plans take a dark turn when she discovers a box of old photographs, letters, and newspaper clippings tied to a decades-old missing girl case, one with eerie parallels to her own past.

The deeper Tiana digs, the more disturbing the truth becomes. Her aunt's home was more than a shelter, it was a sanctuary for someone running from something. And the girl who disappeared all those years ago may not have vanished at all, because Tiana is that girl.

As the secrets unravel, Tiana is forced to confront her identity, her family's lies, and a legacy of survival that was never meant to be uncovered. In reclaiming her past, she discovers a purpose that's been waiting for her all along.
