

THE ALIBI

Genre: Psychological Thriller / Crime Drama

Format: Feature Film (90–100 minutes)

Tone: Gone Girl meets The Undoing, sharp, suspenseful, morally ambiguous

Logline

When a celebrated Black attorney wakes up next to a stranger's dead body and her husband missing, she orchestrates the perfect cover-up, only to discover she's being framed, and her airtight alibi is falling apart.

The Hook

A powerfully intelligent woman weaponizes her legal knowledge to survive the system that's turning against her, only to realize the real enemy was in her own bed all along.

Why It Sells

- Female-led mystery thriller with social relevance
 - Timely themes of media narrative, systemic bias, and digital manipulation
 - Twist-filled plot that keeps audiences guessing until the final beat
 - Prestige casting potential for awards-contender lead role
-

Lead Role: Eleanor Hayes

A brilliant, image-conscious defense attorney whose greatest strength becomes her greatest liability when she's cast as the villain in her own life. A complex, layered role in the vein of Viola Davis (How to Get Away with Murder) or Nicole Kidman (The Undoing).

Comparable Titles

- Gone Girl – unreliable narration & media spectacle
 - The Undoing – upper-class scandal & marital secrets
 - Anatomy of a Scandal – courtroom drama meets psychological warfare
-

Themes

- Who controls the story when truth is weaponized?
 - The erasure of Black women in the justice system
 - Performance, perception, and power in public life
 - The cost of silence and the danger of speaking up
-

Marketing Hooks

- "Her alibi was perfect. Until someone rewrote it."
 - "You can survive the truth, or you can control it."
 - "Innocence is irrelevant when the world's already judged you."
-