Logline:

After a sudden loss, a recently divorced father returns to his family's Christmas tree lot in Southwest Atlanta with his teenage daughter, only to discover that 12 chaotic days of holiday mishaps, community surprises, and a stubbornly charming coffee shop owner across the street might just give him a second chance at love, purpose, and home.

Synopsis:

Marcus Reed is drowning, in grief, in pine needles, and in single fatherhood. After the unexpected death of his father, Marcus returns from New York City to the house he grew up in, unsure of what to do with the aging tree lot his dad left behind. He's got twelve days until Christmas, a daughter who'd rather be on TikTok than helping with "sticks," and a legacy he never planned to carry.

Across the street, Ava Sutton, a grounded single mom and café owner, is just trying to survive the holiday rush without losing her mind. She's not impressed by Marcus, but the chemistry? Immediate and undeniable.

From bootleg Santas to tree thieves, viral videos to community pop-ups, The Twelve Dates of Christmas Tree Lot delivers heart, humor, and Southern holiday magic in every beat. As Marcus and Jada rebuild the lot (and their relationship), a community comes back to life, and Marcus discovers that maybe what he thought he left behind... is exactly what he needs.
