

TRAP HOUSE SITTING

Casting Wish List — Prepared for Internal & Buyer Pitch Use

The following is an aspirational casting list assembled to help buyers picture the tone, energy, and marketability of TRAP HOUSE SITTING. Suggestions are organized by role, with a short rationale tied to what each actor would specifically bring to the part. No actor listed has been contacted, approached, or attached.

CORE CAST

AVA JACKSON

Age 17

Color-coded, conflict-averse, secretly gifted — the reliable one, learning her competence has to be earned, not downloaded.

SUGGESTION

Storm Reid

Proven range from grounded drama to comedy and a track record of carrying ensemble leads. Reads exactly like a girl who color-codes her flashcards and means it.

SUGGESTION

Marsai Martin

Sharp comic instincts paired with real producer's-brain precision offscreen; would nail Ava's control-freak specificity without losing the warmth underneath it.

ZOE JACKSON

Age 17

Ava's twin. Main-character energy hiding real business instincts, and a hard lesson about the difference between hype and care.

Casting note: the script never hinges on mistaking one twin for the other — prioritize chemistry with the Ava actor over physical resemblance.

SUGGESTION

Sofia Wylie

Musical-theater trained with genuine movement and comic timing — fits Zoe's TikTok-native, always-performing energy, and can sell the balcony vulnerability underneath it.

SUGGESTION

Chandler Kinney

Strong comedic-to-dramatic range; can play "chaos with a soft center" without tipping Zoe into caricature, which the Act Two backfire scene depends on.

MALIK OKAFOR

Age 16

Loyal to a fault, chasing 10K subscribers, discovers along the way that he's actually a storyteller.

SUGGESTION

Asante Blackk

Emmy-nominated range that can land Malik's awkward-earnest comedy and still hit the quiet integrity beat when he deletes the $400 DM.

SUGGESTION

Jahi Winston

Sharp comic timing with real dramatic chops in reserve — exactly the combination Malik's late-script growth requires.

LYRIC

Age 19

Guarded, magnetic, fighting to own her masters and her narrative both — the reason everyone's weekend gets loud.

TRACK A — TRAINED ACTRESS

Chase Infiniti

Commanding screen presence with real dramatic weight; can carry Lyric's guardedness in the quiet scenes and the flashback's devastation without a note of performance.

TRACK B — RECOMMENDED

Artist-Turned-Actress

Cast a rising Atlanta-based recording artist making her acting debut, paired with an on-set acting coach. The rooftop performance needs to read as a real bar, not a performed one — precedent: Queen Latifah, T.I., Awkwafina.

KING DREZ

Age 30s

Smooth, dangerous, genuinely convinced he's the machine that lets raw talent survive the business — that conviction is what makes him work as an antagonist.

SUGGESTION

Yahya Abdul-Mateen II
Commanding, controlled-menace credibility; can deliver "I'm the tuning, not the theft" and mean every word of it.

SUGGESTION

Kelvin Harrison Jr.
Magnetic and dangerous-smooth in equal measure; especially strong for the ghostwriter flashback, where Drez has to be seductive and cruel in the same breath.

REACH / ELEVATED PACKAGE

Michael B. Jordan
If the budget supports an elevated package, a name of this caliber materially helps land a platform sale on the strength of the cast alone.

DEON JACKSON

Age 30s

Effortlessly cool producer-uncle. The trust Ava is terrified of breaking — and, it turns out, has already earned.

SUGGESTION

Damson Idris
Snowfall pedigree reads as credible "in the industry" cool on sight, with the range to pivot into real warmth in his scenes with Ava.

SUGGESTION

Aaron Pierre
Leading-man gravitas with genuine warmth underneath — makes "you hear things the rest of us miss" land as truth, not exposition.

MS. GLENDA

Age 60s

The block's memory. Warm, formidable, has already called the front desk twice tonight.

SUGGESTION

Loretta Devine
Legendary comic warmth and weight; would own "don't thank me, impress me" without asking the scene for more space than it needs.

SUGGESTION

Sheryl Lee Ralph
Impeccable comic timing plus the steel the "Mr. Levy is already on his way up" scene requires.

UNCLE RAY

Age 60s

A fixture of the neighborhood who simply appears at gatherings the way weather does. The block's other half of its memory.

SUGGESTION

Glynn Turman
Real ties to the Atlanta and Dungeon Family-era music world the character name-drops; brings warmth and gravity in equal measure.

SUGGESTION

J.B. Smoove
Pure comic instinct — would make "already ahead of you, baby" one of the biggest laughs in the movie.

— ALSO CONSIDER

Mrs. Jackson • 40s	Tika Sumpter — warm and grounded; believable balancing sternness with real pride on the phone call home.
Mr. Levy • 40s, Building Manager	Open casting — the role is not written to a specific ethnicity. Cast for the deadpan-to-decent turn in his one scene.
DJ Cadence • 30s, Radio Personality	A cameo-caliber role built for stunt casting — a recognizable Atlanta on-air or media personality here adds real authenticity capital.

Prepared by NCCA Entertainment for internal development and buyer pitch purposes. All performer names above represent casting inspiration and creative direction only — none have been contacted, offered the role, or attached to TRAP HOUSE SITTING in any capacity. Availability, interest, and deal terms would need to be independently confirmed with representation prior to any formal offer.