

The Black Girl's Guide to Vengeance (and Vodka)

A love story for the digital age

"Some codes are meant to be broken."

Logline

After her Silicon Valley boyfriend dumps her over a video call—to an AI—brilliant software engineer Simone Carter builds a viral "Karma" app for dating accountability. As it spirals out of control, she and her sisterhood must transform it into something real—and in the process, learn what true connection means in the algorithm age.

Phone

AI

Cocktail

Heart

Tone & Style

Tone

Insecure + Silicon Valley + Set It Off energy

Key Emotional Arcs

Insecure humor → Righteous anger → Messy real-world impact → Warm redemption

Visual Texture

Natural-hair affirmations, tech UI overlays, drag-brunch sparkle

Sound

Snappy banter, Atlanta soul & trap instrumentation, ambient tech hum

Background Concept

Sunlit co-working loft with warm natural light

Comps

On-screen DNA

Property of NCCA ENTERTAINMENT INC. Do not duplicate or distribute

Characters & Cast Wishlist

Simone Carter (29)

A brilliant, natural-haired software engineer with a love for vintage band tees

Wishlist: Zazie Beetz / Dominique Fishback

Jameson Cole (34)

A mysterious and handsome novelist, secretly the acclaimed author J.C. Love

Wishlist: Trevante Rhodes / Yahya Abdul-Mateen II

Lola Jenkins (32)

A compassionate trauma therapist and former dancer, providing the group's emotional anchor

Wishlist: Taylour Paige / Teyana Taylor

Divine Carter (45)

Simone's drag queen auntie, a pillar of the community and a source of wisdom and fabulousness

Wishlist: Billy Porter / Nicco Annan

Brandon Matthews (30s)

The quintessential tech bro, charming but with significant blinders on

Wishlist: Glen Powell (cast against type)

Director's Vision

Style Priorities

Shot with warm 35mm vibe to capture the nuance and richness of Black Atlanta. Tech scenes are visually enhanced with stylized, minimal, and emotionally reactive UI elements that float and interact with the characters.

Emotional Arc

Cozy sisterhood moments →

Pulsing tech tension →

Redemptive liberation

Pace & Rhythm

Quick, sharp editing during the app's viral spiral to convey chaos and speed. Slow, meditative pacing during the healing and reflective scenes to allow for emotional depth.

Cultural Integration

A soundtrack collaboration featuring artists like Ari Lennox, with a potential Childish Gambino cameo. Atlanta itself is a character, showcasing its unique "drip," the iconic BeltLine, and the vibrant energy of its drag brunch scene.

Visual Texture

A curated visual experience blending code on screens, the glamour of drag stages, and candid shots of friends at brunch. The film creates a unique visual language that bridges tech aesthetics with soulful human connection.

Visual Palette & Moodboard

Palette

A carefully curated color scheme that balances tech aesthetics with warm, soulful elements.

Look & Feel

A visual juxtaposition of clean, minimalist interfaces and lived-in, soulful interiors. High-contrast scenes that shift between sterile, Silicon Valley-esque offices and the warm, vibrant spaces of the South.

Moodboard

Location Callouts

Atlanta's Tech Corridor

Co-working Lofts

Sleek, modern spaces that feel both aspirational and impersonal

Cultural Hubs

Divine's Drag Brunch

East Atlanta venue, colorful & electric with vibrant energy

Southern Icons

BeltLine

Run/walk scene montage showcasing connection and community

Midtown Rooftop Garden

Simone's loft, an intimate setting for community gatherings

Thematic Resonance & Audience

Core Themes

- Digital harm vs. digital healing
Exploring how technology can both damage and repair human connections
- Sisterhood through accountability
The power of community to provide both support and necessary truth
- Respectability vs. authentic expression
The tension between professional personas and true self-expression
- Real connection in a tech phantom-age
Finding genuine human bonds in an era of algorithmic relationships

Target Audience

Culturally savvy individuals aged 25–45, particularly Black women and their allies. Fans of Insecure, Black-centered tech storytelling, and heartfelt rom-coms with a sharp edge.

Closing & Next Steps

Why Now?

- The story taps into the current cultural reckoning with online culture, tech ethics, and racialized gender politics
- There is a growing and underserved market for authentic, Black women-centered stories

The Ask

- Seeking collaborators and financial backing to finalize the script and move into pre-production
- Open to partnerships with tech/music influencers and Atlanta-based sponsors to enhance authenticity and reach

Contact

NCCA ENTERTAINMENT

A warm, evocative image of Simone and her sisterhood sharing a genuine, mid-laugh embrace

The Black Girl's Guide to Vengeance (and Vodka)

"Some codes are meant to be broken."