SYNOPSIS

Ji-Yeon Kim walks every major runway in Asia. She also walks contraband through customs — coerced for eight years by Director Kim Sung-chul, the industry kingmaker who poisoned her teenage sister to buy her compliance. When a burned CIA officer crosses her path in Singapore, she sees not a threat but a weapon. Together with a Singapore intelligence operative, they assemble the one thing Director Kim never anticipated: a case strong enough to destroy him, encoded in six stolen Joseon Dynasty Royal Seals. The plan is simple. Let her walk one final runway. Let her speak. Let the world watch.

WHY NOW

The hallyu moment is global, but Korean-led prestige action at feature scale remains untapped. FINAL WALK positions a K-fashion heroine against the backdrop of Asia's most recognizable cultural institutions — DDP, Marina Bay, Petronas — with a MacGuffin rooted in stolen national heritage. This is not genre tourism. This is the genre, built from the inside.
