

EXPOSED

Genre: Investigative Documentary / Docu-Reality

Format: 1-Hour Anthology Episodes

Logline:

EXPOSED follows survivors of non-violent but devastating crimes—fraud, digital abuse, workplace sabotage, and institutional betrayal, as they reclaim power by confronting the people who hurt them. Through investigation, emotional unpacking, and real attempts at accountability, each episode reveals that justice isn't always violent... but it's always personal.

Series Overview

While most true-crime content centers on bloodshed, EXPOSED turns its lens toward the equally destructive but often ignored crimes that never make headlines. Each episode spotlights one survivor, tracing their journey from trauma to truth: uncovering evidence, revisiting painful memories, seeking legal recourse, and ultimately facing their perpetrator, either across a table, on a camera call, or in court. It's part investigative thriller, part emotional reckoning.

Why It Matters Now

In an era dominated by canceled culture discourse and digital exploitation, audiences are demanding deeper conversations about accountability. This series exposes the quiet, insidious harms that shape people's lives for years, while giving survivors the platform, validation, and catharsis they were denied.

Key Themes

- The long-term emotional and financial fallout of "invisible crimes"
 - The courage required to pursue justice when the system fails
 - Power, manipulation, exploitation, and the fight to reclaim identity
 - Restorative justice and the complex road to closure
-

Tone & Style

Intimate. Unflinching. Cathartic.

A hybrid approach blends vérité footage, personal interviews, legal documentation, and cinematic reenactments. On-screen texts, emails, and digital receipts bring modern crime into stark focus. Visually: Dirty Money meets Intervention, with the emotional honesty of Red Table Talk.

Target Audience

Adults 25–54, socially conscious viewers, fans of true crime and accountability storytelling. Key comps include The Vow, Dirty Money, The Dropout, Web of Lies, and 60 Minutes.

Unique Selling Points

- Focuses on crimes rarely explored but widely experienced
 - Survivor-led narrative: raw, personal, emotionally gripping
 - Confrontation as the climax, unmatched tension and catharsis
 - Episodic anthology structure with strong binge potential
 - Modern crimes (digital abuse, identity theft, workplace sabotage) with real-world resonance
-

Sample Episode Concepts

- The Boss Who Sabotaged My Career
- The Ex Who Sold My Nudes
- The Hacker Who Took My Identity
- The Church That Shamed Me
- The Scam Artist Who Stole My Inheritance

