

THE FEED

Genre: Social Thriller / Limited Series or MOW

Created by: Kelly R. Tenney

Production Company: NCCA Entertainment

Format: 90-Minute TV Movie or 4–6 Episode Limited Series

Target Networks: Lifetime, BET+, OWN, Netflix, Amazon

LOGLINE:

A brilliant Black tech entrepreneur moves into an exclusive smart-home community, only to discover its AI-driven security system is racially biased and he's the target. As the neighborhood closes in, he must weaponize his own genius to fight back against the digital system built to erase him.

THE HOOK:

The Feed is a slick, suspenseful, and socially charged thriller that taps into modern fears about surveillance, AI bias, and systemic racism. Think Get Out meets Black Mirror, with a Lifetime-style emotional heartbeat. It's a story of digital rebellion, legacy, and the cost of simply being seen.

WHY IT SELLS:

- Timely themes: tech ethics, privacy, gentrification, modern civil rights
 - Castable Black lead in a high-concept genre
 - Thriller pacing with strong emotional core
 - Visual storytelling lends itself to striking promos and viral marketing
 - Flexible format: works as a limited series or standalone TV movie
-

COMPARABLES:

Get Out – racial paranoia & identity war

Black Mirror – tech dystopia aesthetics

Greenleaf – network tone, power dynamics

Reasonable Doubt – character-driven social thriller

TALENT SUGGESTIONS:

John David Washington, Storm Reid, Judith Light, Kiki Layne, Joe Keery

Contact:

Kelly R. Tenney – nccaentertainment@gmail.com
