

Logline:

When the world's first human clone escapes from a secret biotech program, she discovers others like her, each fatally linked to their unsuspecting "prime." As mysterious deaths mount, she must decide whether to protect the life she was never meant to have or expose the conspiracy that made her.

Tone:

- Tense and atmospheric
 - Emotional and character-driven
 - Suspenseful, conspiratorial, and unpredictable

Theme:

Refractions explores identity, free will, and legacy. It asks: Are we bound by the paths written for us, or can we choose our own reflection in the mirror? Themes of survival, betrayal, and connection drive the story forward.

Pitch:

Refractions blends high-concept science fiction with deeply human drama. Like Orphan Black and This Is Us, it pairs adrenaline-fueled mystery with emotional complexity. The show leverages dual performances (clone vs. prime) to showcase the contrasts of nature and nurture, while a conspiracy thriller engine propels each season. This is a story that can generate awards-caliber acting turns, franchise-level mythology, and binge-worthy cliffhangers.

Detailed Synopsis:

Season One opens with Alexis Grant, the first successful clone, escaping a biotech lab. Hiding in plain sight, she crosses paths with her “prime,” a brilliant surgeon named Laura Grant, who is unaware she’s genetically duplicated. Alexis learns that when a prime dies, their clone also dies, an unbreakable fatal link.

Meanwhile, rogue clones emerge from the shadows: some want to fight back, others want to disappear, and others seek vengeance against the corporation that created them. The Warden, a shadowy corporate fixer, tracks Alexis with growing obsession. At the same time, a journalist uncovers a string of mysterious deaths tied to the project.

The season builds to a revelation: the clones weren’t created for science, but for a hidden political and financial agenda, an agenda that endangers not just the clones, but the balance of global power.

Outline (Season One Arc):

- Act I (Episodes 1–3): Alexis escapes. The link between clones and primes is revealed. Laura's life is endangered.
 - Act II (Episodes 4–7): A network of clones emerges. The Warden closes in. Loyalties fracture. Alexis questions whether she can ever truly live free.
 - Act III (Episodes 8–10): Clones and primes collide in a deadly endgame. A devastating sacrifice changes everything. The conspiracy behind the project is exposed, but Alexis discovers a deeper layer, this was only the beginning.

Character Breakdown:

- Alexis Grant / Laura Grant (30s): Clone and Prime. Alexis is resourceful, haunted, and desperate to own her identity. Laura is accomplished, confident, but emotionally closed off. Their bond and conflict drive the series.
 - The Warden (40s–50s): Cold, calculating fixer hunting clones. Morally ambiguous, dangerous, yet strangely fascinated by Alexis.
 - Dr. Mia Sandoval (50s): The scientist who made cloning possible. Guilt-ridden, torn between atonement and survival.
 - Ben Hartley (30s): Ambitious journalist chasing a story that could make his career, or get him killed.
 - Samir Patel (20s–30s): A rogue clone leading a hidden underground network of survivors.

Lookbook / Mood Reel References:

- Visual Style: Neon-noir with fractured glass, double exposure portraits, and refracted prism light.
 - Mood References: Orphan Black, The Bourne Identity, Mr. Robot, Bodyguard.
 - Tone Palette: Cold blues and teals for corporate/conspiracy; warm ambers for emotional/primal moments.

Marketing Hooks & Promo-Ready Taglines:

- "One life. Two paths. Both can't survive."
- "What you don't know can kill you."
- "Every reflection hides a truth."

Promo Angles:

- Actors in dual roles = awards buzz + viral campaign potential.
 - “Choose Your Prime / Choose Your Clone” interactive marketing for social media.
 - Mysterious teaser campaign with fractured mirror imagery.

Target Audience & Market:

- Core Audience: 18–49 drama and thriller fans, especially women and genre audiences.
 - Secondary Audience: Sci-fi fans, mystery/thriller enthusiasts, prestige drama watchers.
 - Platforms Fit: Netflix, Amazon, Apple TV+, HBO/Max, Paramount+, FX.

Why It Sells:

- High-concept sci-fi with mainstream thriller appeal.
 - Compelling dual-role casting opportunity = strong press hook.
 - Bingeable conspiracy thriller with multi-season mythology.
 - Emotional family and identity drama expands beyond core sci-fi audience.
 - Perfectly aligned with current streamer appetite for elevated genre (3 Body Problem, Orphan Black: Echoes).

Comparable Films & Series:

- Orphan Black – Identity mystery, multi-role showcase.
 - Westworld – Sci-fi meets philosophy.
 - This Is Us – Emotional, human core beneath high concept.
 - Bodyguard – Suspenseful pacing and conspiracy tone.

Production Value:

- Cinematic Television: Elevated visuals, polished, stylized, with refracted glass motifs.
 - Budget Range: $5–7M per episode (similar to Westworld, Altered Carbon).
 - Location: Urban centers (Atlanta, Toronto, London), with sleek lab interiors + gritty exteriors.

Story & Hook – Why This Story Matters Now:

As technology races ahead with CRISPR, AI, and synthetic biology, questions of identity and ownership are no longer sci-fi, they're today's headlines. Refractions captures the zeitgeist: Who owns our DNA? Who controls our story? It's thrilling, timely, and built to spark conversation.

Demographics:

- Primary: Adults 18–49, evenly split gender appeal.
 - Secondary: Sci-fi, conspiracy thriller, and prestige drama enthusiasts.
 - Global: Relatable themes of identity, freedom, and survival resonate internationally.

Marketability:

- Awards-friendly concept (dual performances).
- Viral-ready marketing hooks (mirror/reflection campaigns).
- Expansive franchise potential (spinoffs from other clone “families” or origins).
- Strong crossover appeal, genre fans + prestige drama audiences.
