

FLIP SIDE OF LOVE

When love survives the edits.

FLIP SIDE OF LOVE

Genre: Romantic Dramedy

Format: Feature Film

Tone: Grounded, witty, emotionally resonant with a modern Southern flair

LOGLINE

When a rising TV producer is forced to work with her ex on a network renovation show, their reunion sparks more than drama, especially when they uncover a hidden legacy buried in the walls of the historic Atlanta home they're restoring.

SUMMARY

Fast-talking producer Kendra Blake returns to Atlanta for her shot at a breakout home renovation pilot. But she's blindsided when the network hires Dez Carter, her ex, as the general contractor. Old wounds crack the plaster as they attempt to work together on-camera, while off-camera, the producers push for performative drama. Things shift when Kendra and Dez discover a sealed crate in the basement, revealing the home's history as a safe haven built by an uncredited Black architect during the Civil Rights era. As the house's true story unfolds, Kendra must decide whether to play into the network's narrative or reclaim the legacy behind the walls and perhaps the love she thought she left behind.

THEMES

- Second chances in life and love
- Legacy, reclamation, and Black cultural preservation

- The ethics of storytelling in a reality TV age
 - Emotional labor, honesty, and healing through restoration
-

WHY IT WORKS

- A commercial hook (renovation + romance) with emotional depth and cultural weight
 - Visually rich: one-location house with transformation payoffs and production realism
 - Built-in episodic/franchise potential (Hidden Blueprint)
 - Appeals to fans of The Photograph, Queen Sugar, Sweet Magnolias, and HGTV-style docuseries
-

TARGET AUDIENCE

- Women 25–54
 - Black audiences craving aspirational romance with substance
 - Streaming viewers drawn to second-chance love, renovation formats, and Southern storytelling
-

TAGLINE

This home has history. But can they build a future?
